FR. RUDY'S REFLECTION: In today's Gospel, we encounter a man who approaches Jesus with a question that echoes through the ages: "What must I do to inherit eternal life?" This man, often interpreted to be young and wealthy, represents each one of us in our quest for meaning and fulfillment. Despite his material success, he recognizes that something is still missing in his life, prompting him to seek answers from the one he believes has the key to eternal life. Jesus' response is both compassionate and challenging. He first acknowledges the man's observance of the commandments, affirming the importance of living a moral life. Then, He looks at the man with love and invites him to take the next step—a radical step. "Go, sell what you have, and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven; then come, follow me." Yes, this call to discipleship demands a complete reorientation of priorities. Jesus is not merely asking this man to give up his wealth; he is asking him to let go of anything that stands in the way of fully following God. It's a call to embrace life where love of God and love of neighbor take precedence over material possessions, social status, or personal ambitions.

For many of us, this call can feel daunting because often we may find ourselves clinging to the things that give us a sense of security or identity. We might be hesitant to surrender our comforts, our plans, or our wealth, fearing the uncertainty that comes with letting go. But Jesus' message is clear: to inherit eternal life, we must be willing to let go of anything that holds us back from fully embracing the kingdom of God. True discipleship requires more than a superficial adherence to religious practices; it requires a profound transformation of the heart that allows us to find true freedom and joy, even in the midst of sacrifice. As we reflect on today's Gospel, let us ask ourselves: What are the things that we cling to, the things that prevent us from fully following Jesus? Are we willing to trust in God's promise, to let go of our earthly treasures, and to seek the eternal treasure that comes from a life lived in love and service?

RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES: In view of the upcoming election, consider this weekly theme to focus on: Rights and Responsibilities. Human beings, created in the image and likeness of God, have basic rights which protect our dignity and ensure all can live a full human life. Because these rights are universal, we have the responsibility to help maintain and protect these rights, not just for ourselves, but for all. Under this principle fall issues such as access to quality education, healthy food, healthcare, safe and affordable housing, and nonviolent neighborhoods. Find out more at www.iVoteCatholic.org.
